Significance. [Group will use the wing emblem with group designation in the scroll.]
The emblem is symbolic of the Wing. The heraldic chevron, represents support and signifies the Wing's support of our nation's quest for peace. The blue of the chevron represents the sky, the primary theater of Air Force operations. The lightning bolt symbolizes speed and aggressiveness with which the unit performs. The color of the shield represents the Air Corps and commemorates the service of the 56th Fighter Group, whose honors and history the Wing inherits. The emblem bears the Air Force colors of golden yellow and ultramarine blue. [Source: 1967 Emblem Approval Letter.]

Narrative.

Established on 20 November 1940, the 56th Pursuit Group (Interceptor) activated on 15 January 1941 at Savannah Air Base, Georgia. It was assigned to the Southeast Air District (later, Third Air Force), but was immediately attached to 17th Bombardment Wing [Light], until 16 May 1941. On 26 May 1941, the group moved to Charlotte Army Air Base, North Carolina. About 10 December 1941, the group moved to Charleston Municipal Airport, South Carolina. On 15 January 1942, it was assigned to the I Interceptor (later, I Fighter) Command. Two days later, it moved to Teaneck Armory, New Jersey. On 15 May 1942, it was redesignated as the 56th Fighter Group. The 56th Pursuit Group (Interceptor) trained with the Seversky P-35, Curtis P-36 Hawk, Bell P-39 Airacobra, and Curtis P-40 Warhawk aircraft, participated in maneuvers, served as an air defense organization, and functioned as an operational training unit until June 1942. In June, the group began receiving the Republic P-47 Thunderbolt and began training for combat. Around 17 June 1941, the group was attached to the III Interceptor Command, and then assigned to it on 2 October 1941. On 6 July 1942, the group moved to Bridgeport, Connecticut. On 11 August 1942, it was assigned to the New York Air Defense Wing. In December 1942, the 56th left the United States to join the war in Europe.

On 12 January 1943, the group arrived at Kings Cliffe, England, and was assigned to VIII Fighter Command around that time. On 5 April 1943, the group moved to Horsham St Faith, England. As the first US P-47 fighter group to enter combat in the European Theater of Operations (ETO), the 56th entered combat with a fighter sweep in the area of St Omer, France, on 13 April 1943. On 4 July 1943, the group was assigned to the 4th Air Defense (later, 65th Fighter) Wing. Five days later, the 56th moved to Halesworth, England. Nine months later, on 19 April 1944, it moved to Boxted, England. The group flew its last combat mission on 21 April 1945, and the war in the ETO ended on 8 May 1945. On 28 August 1945, the group was assigned to the 66th Fighter Wing. Around 15 September 1945, the 56th moved to Little Walden, England. On 11 October 1945, the group left for the United States. It arrived at Camp Kilmer, New Jersey, on 16 October 1945, and inactivated there two days later. During the group's two years in the ETO, the 56th destroyed 677 enemy aircraft in aerial combat, more than any other fighter group in the ETO. It flew combat missions over France, the Low Countries, and Germany to escort bombers that attacked industrial establishments, V-weapon sites, submarine pens, and other targets on the Continent. The group also strafed and dive-bombed airfields, troops, and supply points; attacked the enemy's communications; and flew counter-air and interdiction missions during the invasion of Normandy in June 1944. The 56th supported the Allied forces for the breakthrough at St Lo in July 1944, the Battle of the Bulge, December 1944-January 1945, and helped to defend the Remagen bridgehead against air attacks in March 1945. It was awarded its first Distinguished Unit Citation (DUC) for aggressiveness in seeking out and destroying enemy aircraft and for attacking enemy air bases, 20 Feb-9 March 1944, and a second DUC for strikes against antiaircraft positions while supporting the airborne attack on Holland in September 1944.

On 1 May 1946, the 56th Fighter Group was reactivated at Selfridge Field (later, Air Force Base), Michigan and assigned to Fifteenth Air Force. The group initially flew its old friend the Thunderbolt. That same year, it added the North American P (later, F)-51 Mustang to its inventory. The next year, the group converted to the Lockheed P (later, F)-80 Shooting Star. In January 1947, the 56th was attached to the 65th Combat Fighter Wing, Very Long Range, Provisional. On 15 August 1947, the group was assigned to the 56th Fighter (later, 56th Fighter-Interceptor) Wing. From May 1946, the group trained to maintain proficiency as a mobile strike force; including bomber escort mission until transferred from Strategic Air Command to Continental Air Command on 1 December 1948. The group added an air defense mission in the northeastern US in April 1949. On 20 January 1950, the group was redesignated as the 56th Fighter-Interceptor Group. In 1950, the group transferred the F-80s out and added the North American F-86 Sabre. The next year, the group added back to the Thunderbolt and the Mustang, as well as the Lockheed F-94 Starfire. On 6 February 1952, the group was inactivated.

On 20 June 1955, the group was redesignated as the 56th Fighter Group (Air Defense). On 18 August 1955, the group activated and replaced the 501st Air Defense Group at O'Hare Intl Airport, Chicago, Illinois. Flying F-86 Sabres again, the 56th assumed the air defense mission and operations of base facilities there. The group was assigned to the 4706th Air Defense Wing, the 37th Air Division on 8 February 1956, and the 30th Air Division on 1 April 1959. Moving without personnel or equipment to K. I. Sawyer AFB, Michigan, on 1 October 1959, the group absorbed the resources of the 473d Fighter Group, flying the McDonnell F-101 Voodoo. On 1 April 1960, the 56th was assigned to the Sault Sainte Marie Air Defense Sector and immediately attached to the 30th Air Division until 14 June 1960. On 1 February 1961, the 56th was inactivated and discontinued.

On 31 July 1985, the group was redesignated as the 56th Tactical Fighter Group and the 56th Operations Group on 28 October 1991. On 1 November 1991, the group activated at MacDill Air Force Base, Florida, 1 November 1991-4 January 1994. As part of the 56th Fighter Wing, the group conducted Lockheed F-16 Fighting Falcon transition training, from 1 November 1991 to August 1993. It phased down at MacDill AFB, in mid-1992 to inactivation on 4 January 1994.

56th Operations Group reactivated and replaced the 58th Operations Group on 1 April 1994 at Luke Air Force Base, Arizona. It conducted McDonnell Douglas F-15E Strike Eagle combat crew training until March 1995, combat crew training for U.S. and Allied services with the F-16 to present, and began flying the Lockheed Martin F-35A Lightning II for pilot training of U.S. and Allied services on 10 March 2014.
