Emblem. Originally approved on 10 Apr 1978; newest rendition approved on 26 June 2017.

Blazon. On a disc Azure, a stylized eagle displayed throughout, with talons extended forward, Proper; all within a narrow border Yellow.

Attached below the disc, a Blue scroll edged with a narrow Yellow border and inscribed “550TH FIGHTER SQ” in Yellow letters..

Motto. None.

Significance. Ultramarine blue and Air Force yellow are the Air Force colors. Blue alludes to the sky, the primary theater of Air Force operations. Yellow refers to the sun and the excellence required of Air Force personnel. The gold brown American bald eagle, poised in flight with claws extended forward, is a powerful and majestic symbol of freedom. It embodies great strength and lethality of air operations.

Narrative.

The 550th Night Fighter Squadron was constituted on 3 May 1944. On 1 June 1944, it activated at Hammer Field, California, assigned to Fourth Air Force, but attached to the 319th Wing as of that date. As part of its training, squadron pilots flew the Vultee BT-13 Valiant, Beechcraft AT-10 Wichita, and Northrop YP-61 Black Widow. On 25 August 1944, the .squadron went to Visalia Army Air Field, California, which was a sub-installation of Hammer Field. At that point, squadron aircrews flew Northrop P-61 Black Widow and the Douglas P-70 Nighthawk in their training and throughout much of the war. On 2 December 1944, the unit was ready to go to the Pacific Theater and was reassigned to Thirteenth Air Force. On 12 December 1944, the 550th Night Fighter Squadron was assigned to the XIII Fighter Command. Two days later, it arrived at Hollandia, New Guinea. Between 31 December 1944 and 14 February 1945, the unit had a detachment operating from Middleburg Island. On 14 February 1945, the 550th Night Fighter Squadron moved to Morotai Island and was attached to XIII Bomber Command. On 8 March 1945, the unit began operating a detachment from Tacloban, Leyte. On 7 April 1945, the rest of the squadron moved to Tacloban and attached to the 85th Fighter Wing. Between 27 April and 17 June 1945, the unit had a detachment flying out of Zamboanga, Mindanao. Between 28 May and August 1945, another detachment flew out of Sanga Sanga, Sulu. Between 9 and 19 June 1945, a third detachment flew out of Puerto Princesa, Palawan. The end of combat for the unit in June mirrored the end of the unit's attachment to the 85th Fighter Wing. At some point in 1945, the 550th Night Fighter Squadron flew the night fighter version of the Lockheed P-38 Lightning. On 4 December 1945, the 550th Night Fighter Squadron departed Tacloban, Leyte. On 3 January 1946, the unit arrived at Camp Stoneman, California, and inactivated the next day. The 550th earned a Philippine Presidential Unit Citation, and two campaign ribbons for its actions in the Pacific Theater.

On 18 January 1970, the unit was redesignated the 550th Tactical Fighter Training Squadron, assigned to the 58th Tactical Training Wing, and activated at Luke Air Force Base, Arizona, to flying the North American F-100 Super Sabre. The next year, it transitioned to the McDonnell Douglas F-4 Phantom II. In 1974, the 550th Tactical Fighter Training Squadron transitioned to the McDonnell Douglas F-15 Eagle. On 29 August 1979, Tactical Air Command reassigned the unit to the 405th Tactical Training Wing. In 1989, the unit transitioned to the McDonnell Douglas F-15E Strike Eagle. On 1 October 1991, Tactical Air Command reassigned the 550th Tactical Fighter Training Squadron to the 58th Operations Group. On 1 November 1991, the unit was redesignated 550th Fighter Squadron. Thirteen days later, the 550th Fighter Squadron inactivated. During that period, the unit's mission was to train aircrew to fly its aircraft.

On 25 March 1994, the 550th Fighter Squadron reactivated at Luke Air Force Base, assigned to the 58th Operations Group and continued its mission to train aircrews to fly the F-15E Strike Eagle. On 1 April 1994, Air Education and Training Command reassigned the 550th Fighter Squadron to the 56th Operations Group. On 31 March 1995, the 550th Fighter Squadron inactivated. While at Luke, it received six Air Force Outstanding Unit Awards.

On 3 April 2017, the 550th Fighter Squadron reactivated at Kingsley Field Air National Guard Base, Oregon. Assigned to the 56th Operations Group, the unit conducted pilot training flying the F-15 Eagle as part of the Chief of Staff of the USAF's Total Force Initiative.
